

Acknowledgments

This volume of 15 chapters featuring original research and analysis is the product of a collection of very talented and dedicated professionals who committed time and expertise over the course of 22 months to generate the final product found here. I am grateful for the chance to work with each of them—some for the first time and many others with whom I have had the pleasure of working with before. Each of them deserves detailed appreciation here.

First, the 15 chapters are the product of a diverse team of authors and co-authors—subject matter experts all—who evaluate the geostrategic environment of the mid-2020s with an impressive depth of expert knowledge and breadth of analytical insight. Each demonstrated consistent thoughtfulness, patience, and dedication during the iterative rounds of chapter editing and enhancement that characterized our writing process. A special mention is due to my colleagues Jeff Mankoff and Phillip C. Saunders, both distinguished research fellows in the Institute for National Strategic Studies (INSS) at the National Defense University (NDU). They went above and beyond the call of duty to lend their superb expertise on China (Phil) and Russia (Jeff) while serving as co-authors for multiple chapters of the volume. Their special efforts were vital to the book’s aim to produce a cohesive narrative about the trajectory of Great Power rivalry at mid-decade—a narrative that underpins the array of functional and regional Great Power competition dynamics distributed across multiple chapters. At the end of the day, the collective wisdom and enduring value of this volume is a testimony to both the expertise and the dedication of its talented chapter contributors.

Also, three production support teammates—research interns and assistants—made key contributions to the completion of this book. Research intern Will Rieck provided stolid formatting and spot research for several developing book chapters during the fall of 2024. Research assistant Alison O’Neill contributed spot research and formatting support for two book chapters and helped sequence a segment of appendix A during her time with the project over the summer and early fall of 2024. Finally, research intern and later research assistant Ryan Celski made vital contributions to the success of this project over the course of all 22 months. From the fall of 2023 through the summer of 2025, Ryan assisted with the original research and early framing of most of the 15 chapters. He then did spot research and formatting work on them. His original research produced the refined data found in appendix B, simultaneously establishing several new quality data sources itemized for reader reference in that appendix’s respective subtabs. Ryan also made iterative contributions to the generation of appendix A. In these and many other ways, Ryan made an exceptional contribution to the successful completion of this book. I could not have been more fortunate to have interacted with these three staff members who were integral to the production of this book.

Next, the publication team of teams—NDU Press, GPO Creative Services, and the Defense Office of Prepublication and Security Review (DOPSR)—merit gratitude for their professionalism and persistence in vetting, crafting, and then generating the high-caliber final format of this book. I am grateful to William T. Eliason at NDU Press and Cameron Morse at DOPSR for their dedication and alacrity in vetting and clearing of each of the 15 chapters and other publication content. Recently retired from NDU Press, John Church provided thoughtful copyediting for many of the book's draft chapters, as did Lisa Yambrick, Jeffrey D. Smotherman, and Christine Moritz. John Church, Jeff Smotherman, and Latosha Adams helped generate quality graphics and pictures for the book. Marco Marchegiani of GPO Creative Services provided expert guidance for book cover art, text layout, and overall volume design. Susan Carroll, Christine Moritz, and Jason Gosnell proofread the volume. Last—but certainly not least—Jeff Smotherman and Latosha Adams generated the multimedia platforming and book publicity efforts.

Finally, I extend heartfelt thanks and deep appreciation to NDU Press Executive Editor Jeff Smotherman. As he has been for every one of the hundreds of high-quality outputs published by NDU Press over more than two decades, Jeff was the driving force behind the entire production process for this book from copyediting to layout styling, to cover design, and much more. Always a hands-on and head-engaged editor, Jeff was exceptionally committed to this production process for Strategic Assessment 2025, dedicating himself to its successful completion even as his impending NDU retirement date drew closer. Jeff's professionalism in this publication process, one of his last, exemplifies his career with NDU Press—one committed to the highest-caliber content and production values. It is my earnest hope that Strategic Assessment 2025 will stand as testimony to Jeff's enduring legacy at NDU Press. All of us at INSS and across NDU will miss him.

—THOMAS F. LYNCH III